"Twitter is a service for short text messages between people. Twitter has a unique architecture that consists of a set of functions and features and the basic structure of the Twitter platform is based on a peer to peer distributed message store. From an end user's point of view, the primary feature of Twitter is the ability to send and read messages. At its core, the Twitter message service allows a user to send any kind of message, short or long, in any language to and from anyone." About 1 billion short messages are sent on Twitter every day. This is a fact. Twitter reached this result in 6 years. Twitter has introduced many features in order to make its service the most used free social network. The service uses XML to communicate. Messages can be sent through Twitter.com or through third party applications. At the time of writing this article, the mobile application installed on the phone is Twitter for iPhone and Twitter for Android and also now the service can be accessed via the Web at twitter.com. The growth of Twitter started in 2006 when the service launched. The service went through a period of fever and it was extremely popular in the beginning. Then it became popular after 2009 when a simple mechanism for users to receive regular messages. The use of Twitter has become widespread and it has rapidly spread all over the world. In 2007, on average 10 million messages were sent in the UK. In 2008 this figure rose to 30 million messages and in 2009 it reached 50 million. Twitter has been growing very fast and the service continues to grow. With the release of its Android application in 2008, Twitter reaches a new market. Twitter's services are free and it is open to everyone. Twitter is available in more than 185 languages. The service has numerous applications and it can be used in a variety of ways.
