Help documentation included: HD Tune Pro comes with extensive help documentation that covers the entire program's features and available options. System Requirements: Windows 7/8/8.1/10 (64-bit versions of these operating systems are supported) HD Tune Pro Screenshot: HD Tune Pro Professional was developed in 2013 by Hard Disk Test GmbH, a company that has been involved in the testing and evaluation of hard disk drives and solid state drives for many years. Their experience has proven the value of HDTune for the testing of various devices, especially those for the home. Why would anyone pay $400 for this? If it is to benchmark a drive, and why would it be better than HD Tune free, which can be had for free? There are over 100 free benchmark tools on the web, can't see the appeal of this one. It's free and you can already run the benchmarks yourself. I had no problems with this app. Run it through the website, not the app. Edit: and if you're having problems, remember it was free a year ago. This is the free version for now, and a paid version is coming in 2017. How are people giving this app a one star review? It's free, and is pretty easy to use if you get it through the website. I have no problems with it, and I can recommend it to other people.
