“The technology we are bringing to FIFA has the potential to fundamentally change the way the game is played,” said Matthias Hölzl, Co-Founder of Sense. “In our research we compared FIFA games from the past with professional clubs from the present day. The difference in game mechanics and strategies between the two games is clearly visible. And we want to bring that to FIFA.” The motion capture data is integrated into FIFA 22 by using it to power pitch animations, player movements, ball physics and interactions with the ball. The data collected from a player’s actual movements is also used to power things like their sprint and acceleration, as well as movements used to communicate to teammates during a game. “We have a world class team of people at EA Sports behind-the-scenes working hard to make FIFA 22 the best football game of all time. Bringing ‘Hyper Motion’ to FIFA is a key component of that, as it enables the technology we have built at Sense to impact the game in an exciting and unique way.” said Patrick Söderlund, Executive Vice President, Marketing at EA SPORTS. FIFA 22 on PS4 includes all the coverstar players on PlayStation 4. EA SPORTS players will have access to all the coverstars on Xbox One and PC. The Champions League, FA Cup, Europa League and Europa League Qualifiers are all returning. FIFA Ultimate Team has updated and improved play and scoring. Major goalkeepers will get legendary status for winning certain Champions League trophies, their FUT ratings will change, and there will be improved functionality for managers to switch between goalkeepers quickly. The new “Celebrate the World Cup” mode will deliver new ways to interact with the World Cup, including an enhanced World Cup schedule, curated World Cup events, new rewards and more. EA SPORTS has also added that users will be able to replay the competitions of each year of the World Cup in FIFA Ultimate Team. What is new this year? New Features: MatchDay Dynamic Weather: The Dynamic Weather system, which introduces new elements to the weather, is now more dynamic and unpredictable. The development team worked to simulate the weather and climate around the world, and each of the game's real-world stadiums and training grounds now feature localized weather, based on the time of the year and city in which the stadium was built. Smarter Defending: AI teams from more advanced leagues will use new tactics to create more challenging matches. The team studied the strategies and tactics of the top leagues in the world and how they counter those strategies. Players will need to be on their toes, and even the best goalkeeper may find themselves on the back foot. Intelligent Crowd: The in-game crowds of the real world have been improved to create a more intense experience for the players. EA SPORTS FIFA is the only football game series to feature real-time spectator reactions, adding vocal crowds to stadiums and chants to crowds outside stadiums. The match itself will also be affected by such factors as the time of the year and weather, with clear skies bringing out a different atmosphere to rainy conditions. Intelligent Finishing: Teams are no longer limited to one-touch finishing. There is a significant boost to accuracy when shooting from outside the penalty box. An attacking player will now often be better positioned closer to the goal or on an angle to the goalpost than a defender or goalkeeper, allowing more shooting accuracy. Defenders will know that they may be forced into multi-pass defensive plays as a result. The change is meant to encourage players to attack more in the final third.
