Q: mysql, c# for fetching two different queries one after the other I am trying to execute two queries in my c# server side code. First query is a select statement and the second one is an insert statement The first query should fetch data from a table and insert the data into another table. The data is to be inserted in an existing table in the second query. Can anyone tell me what is the syntax to execute these two queries. A: I will show you an example here: using (SqlConnection conn = new SqlConnection()) { conn.ConnectionString = @"server=localhost;User Id=root;database=DBname"; conn.Open(); MySqlCommand cmd = conn.CreateCommand(); cmd.CommandText = "select * from Table1;"; cmd.ExecuteNonQuery(); // second query: cmd.CommandText = "insert into Table2 (col1, col2) values ('col1value', 'col2value');"; cmd.ExecuteNonQuery(); } Remember, for select queries execute the command, the command will return the number of rows selected. Egypt has surpassed Saudi Arabia as the world's largest importer of weapons from the United States, an authority on regional conflicts said Tuesday. After Egypt was the world's ninth biggest purchaser of U.S. weapons, it has jumped to fifth place at the expense of Saudi Arabia, according to estimates compiled by Conflict Armament Research (CAR). Conflict Armament Research does not name countries in its reports, but based on what has been disclosed publicly, the analyst publication estimates where weapons are sourced. CAR found that Egypt has surpassed Saudi Arabia as a military importer of U.S. small arms, with roughly 3,400 imports in the first half of 2014 versus about 3,300 in the first six months of last year. Egypt is also importer of small arms for the United Arab Emirates, which has now surpassed the U.S. in terms of imports, CAR said. Saudi Arabia has increased its own domestic production, although it still remains heavily dependent on imports of U.S. weapons, which in turn remain a major source of revenue for American
